Context

Globally, the framework for 21st century learning has recognized the need to interweave leadership skills with core subjects of basic education. Research has now established that students with exposure to leadership skills have shown better learning outcome. In India, we will have to inculcate behavioral traits amongst school students which promote leadership.

However, there is strong gap in beneficiaries ability to leverage these efforts for their development.

The founders of the "Foundation for Capability Building (FCB)" recognized this unmet need and ventured to create a it's flagship program LEAAD.

This initiative also stems from the fact that our country needs to build not just SMART cities and infrastructure, but invest in developing SMART citizens too.

The best way is to work with Adolescents, who are still living with families and are capable of influencing families. They can give positive and quick response in terms of behavioral modifications. Besides, they are the future citizens of our country.

We will have to inculcate behavioral traits amongst school students For strong and confident future India. It is therefore necessary to impart structured leadership inputs to students. It also can become pivot in achieving our Prime Minister's vision for RURBAN India and also for promoting Swachh Bharat mission.

LEAAD

LEAAD offers several programs of assessment, development and sustenance through various tools and techniques. LEAAD adapts a framework, based on globally renowned Positive Youth Development framework of Richard M. Lerner. In last three years, more than 20,000 students have participated in and benefitted from various LEAAD activities.

4C - Character – Confidence – Collaboration – Competence

LEAAD's aim is to Discover - Develop - Demonstrate Leadership Capabilities in adolescents

LEAAD's other programs are:

Mission

"Fostering leadership amongst adolescents by providing opportunities to Discover - Develop - Demonstrate their unique abilities for creating and sustaining ethical leadership in society."

LEAAD - Ek Pahel

According to Planning Commission of India, 22.8% of India's population are adolescents (10 - 19 years old)

Major challenges faced by adolescents in rural and semi-urban areas

- High ratio of school dropout
- Juvenile delinquency
- Unemployment
- Ineffective ecosystem to promote entrepreneurship
- Absence of life skill teachings
- Apathy for higher education

To provide solution to above issues LEAAD - Ek Pahel Program was designed for students of standard 7th to 12th.

It is delivered using experiential methodology by certified facilitators in Gujarati/Hindi/English. It enables beneficiary students to discover, develop and demonstrate their leadership capabilities.
